

This might be the greatest threat to democracy and the free flow of information in my lifetime.

I am shocked and saddened that such a change is even being considered. One of the few things that differentiates life in the early years of the rule of George Bush from the early years of life under Adolph Hitler is that we have access to a variety of information sources. It gets harder every year, but by flipping TV channels or pressing buttons on the car radio information and opinions that have been produced by a variety of business entities and interests are available. This rule change will put an end that in a few years. There will be small circle of corporate entities that will see to it that only their opinions are broadcast and heard.

It disgusts me that this topic has gotten as far as it has. I urge you to think of the world you will be creating for your children. No kickback or political favor being offered to you will make up for suffering you will be inflicting on future generations.
